

ORGANISATION FOR WOMEN IN SCIENCE NOW IN MOUAI

scheme for established researchers.

The women body which has a significant role in educating women in science, offers more opportunities for women to access high education in science, strengthening women role in community's developments, creating strong network of women scientist and considering women special need when they are travelling with children in the fellowship.

An Independent, non-profit and non-governmental body – Organization for Women in Science for the Developing World (OWSD) based in Trieste, Italy is now in MOUAI. It was founded in 1987 as the first International Forum to unite eminent women scientists from developing and developed worlds with the objective of strengthening their role in the development process and promoting their representation in scientific and technological leadership.

This organization also provides a series of opportunities for women scientists from developing world including networking for members PhD fellowships for successful applicants and an award

DVC ADMIN Prof Joy C. Nwabueze, flanked by other OWSD members.

VC's HEART-TO-HEART CHAT WITH THE STUDENTS

Prof. Francis O. Orunta, VC, University of Port Harcourt

It was what welcomed the students and urged them to be of good composure as they bore likened to their hearts to the VC.

Ushered in with a standing ovation and happy cheers, the Vice-Chancellor in his address to the student expressed his happiness to have had the opportunity to rob minds with them, just as he expressed his dissatisfaction towards their lackadaisical attitude to prayers and the National Anthem.

Focusing on the issues of the day, Prof. Orunta prompted the Student Union Government to develop a good rapport with the students so that they will always remain acquainted with the situations on ground and around the University.

While congratulating the first year students, he hammered on the need to study seriously to emerge with enviable results, warning that examination malpractices, truancy and very poor results will no longer be tolerated by the

Francis Orunta, VC, University of Port Harcourt

Francis Orunta, VC, University of Port Harcourt, with other officials

Francis Orunta, VC, University of Port Harcourt, with other officials

Francis O. Orunta the 5th Vice Chancellor of the University, a man whose great reputation precedes him.

During this meeting which held at the University pavilion, with students filled to its space capacity, the Dean of Student Affairs Prof. Uchenna Okolie,

Without mincing words, he challenged the students to take their relationship with God seriously as all human affairs lies solely in His hands as our creator, Maker and protector of all mankind and having in mind that destiny cannot be controlled by man.

University Management.

Responding to questions raised by them, the Vice-Chancellor explained that the issue of 'shuttle' as a means of transportation in the university is one which the management has and will not put to rest until adequate solutions are

SUCCESS IS WHEN YOUR "SIGNATURE" changes to "AUTOGRAPH" by APJ Abdul Kalam.